ONE OF NEWEST HAT NOVELTIES

When a little girl appears with an embroidered bird on the side of her hat you may know she is wearing one of the newest novelties in millinery. It may be a dark green parrot on a white hat, or it may be a robin red-breast or any other of the birds with an attractive unique trimming may be embroidered on the hat if it be of white felt and the wings embroidered on a separate piece so that they will stand out from the plume. The body and head in this hat. No other trimming is needed unless it be ribbons fastened front of the dress under the chin.

MOOSE DISPUTE SETTLED THROUGH MEDIUM OF COURT

Much interest has been manifested by the various subordinate lodges throughout the country concerning the long civil suit affecting the ownership of the furniture seized by the supreme officers et al from the Los Angeles lodge No. 386, L. O. O. M., incorporated, and to give the readers of this publication a complete and comprehensive understanding as to the legal phase of this celebrated case we print herewith a synopsis or resume of the case as prepared by our attorneys, Brother Ingle Carpenter, Georgia P. Bullock and Charles W. Fourl, says the Los Angeles Moose Messenger.

Judge Wellborn's decision, in substance, was as follows: "Judge Charles Wellborn, superior judge for the state of California, county of Los Angeles, department five, superior court, gave in substance the following opinion in deciding the case of the Supreme Lodge of the World, Loyal Order of Moose, vs. the Los Angeles lodge, No. 386, Loyal Order of Moose, a corporation. The action was an action which is technically known as a claim and delivery action, and arose upon the supreme lodge and the members of an unincorporated lodge, recently formed by the supreme lodge, sued for the property, including the furniture of the defendant incorporated lodge, claiming that the property had been dedicated to the supreme lodge and that upon the supreme lodge revoking the charter of the defendant lodge the property was forfeited to the supreme lodge for the benefit of the new lodge referred to.

In this action the supreme lodge had taken by replevin the furniture and property from the possession of the defendant lodge and its members upon filing bonds in the sum of $60,000 to pay all damages which might result should the judgment be in favor of the defendant lodge.

Judge Wellborn first considers the question as to whether or not the contention of the plaintiff's attorneys that the local defendant lodge was legally incorporated is true or not, and holds that inasmuch as the local lodge was doing business as a corporation in good faith and incorporated in good faith and are being sued as a corporation and answered as a corporation, that it does not make any difference legally whether or not they were properly incorporated.

The court then considers the question of the claim that said property was dedicated to the supreme lodge or its purposes and states that an examination of the constitution and laws and purposes of the supreme lodge and the dispensation granted to the subordinate lodges, does not show that the supreme lodge has any principles or any ideals in any way different from the ones that are generally adopted in civilized countries among all fraternal organizations.

The court further holds that there is nothing in the constitution or by-laws of the supreme lodge or the defendant lodge that in any way indicates or sets apart the property for any principles or ideals except the use of the property by the members of the defendant lodge themselves.

The court then holds that there is no analogy between cases of ecclesiastical societies upon this point and cases of fraternal societies similar to the Loyal Order of Moose, especially where property rights are involved.

The court then holds that the property has always been in the possession of the defendant lodge and its members and was found in their possession when this action started and that he can conceive of no theory or legal proposition upon which the plaintiffs can consider or assert that they are entitled to the possession of the property or to any rights in said property.

The court then holds that the new lodge, known as New 386, formed under a new dispensation from the supreme lodge, is a separate and distinct association from the old association and has no connection in any way whatsoever with the old 386.

The court then orders the return of the property to the defendant corporation or the payment of its value, which the court approximates at about $20,000, together with $6000.00 damages for depriving the defendant corporation and its members of the furniture, and the sum of approximately $4000.00 damages for the injury in the depreciation of the property through its removal.

In accordance with the above decision the attorneys for the defendant corporation have prepared the findings for the court to sign, upon which he passes his decision and the law requires that these findings shall be served upon the attorneys for the plaintiff five days before the court shall finally sign same, and upon such findings being signed the court enters a judgment which requires that the property be returned.

Should the plaintiff's attorneys attempt to hold the property pending an appeal, they must file sufficient bonds in double the value of all damages, together with the value of the property, pending the appeal, and inasmuch as the court has held that the damages are practically $1000.00 per week, we do not anticipate that any surety company will be desirous of
